

Exhibit 2: Site Photographs and Renderings of the New Exploratorium

The bulkhead of Pier 15 was constructed in a Neo-Classical style, with Beaux-Arts inspiration.

Pier 17 is to the left of Pier 15, with a 1950s parking lot covering the water between the piers.

Exhibit 2: Site Photographs and Renderings of the New Exploratorium

Piers 15/17 as viewed from San Francisco Bay with Pier 17 in the foreground.

Piers 15/17 as viewed from San Francisco toward Treasure Island and the Bay Bridge.

Exhibit 2: Site Photographs and Renderings of the New Exploratorium

Architectural rendering of the new Exploratorium at Piers 15/17 on the Embarcadero.

New public access and water visible after removal of the parking lot between Piers 15/17.

Exhibit 2: Site Photographs and Renderings of the New Exploratorium

Rendering of the Bay Observatory and a portion of the museum's 1.5-acres of public space.

The Bay Observatory "transparent building" will have 360 degree views of the Bay and City.

Exhibit 2: Site Photographs and Renderings of the New Exploratorium

Rendering of the views from within the Bay Observatory, looking out toward San Francisco Bay.

View of the new Exploratorium on Piers 15/17 from San Francisco Bay.