The 8,532-acre Cemex Redwoods property from above.

Exhibit 6: Site Photographs

The property has 6,000 acres of forest habitat, with more than 4,500 acres of coast redwoods.

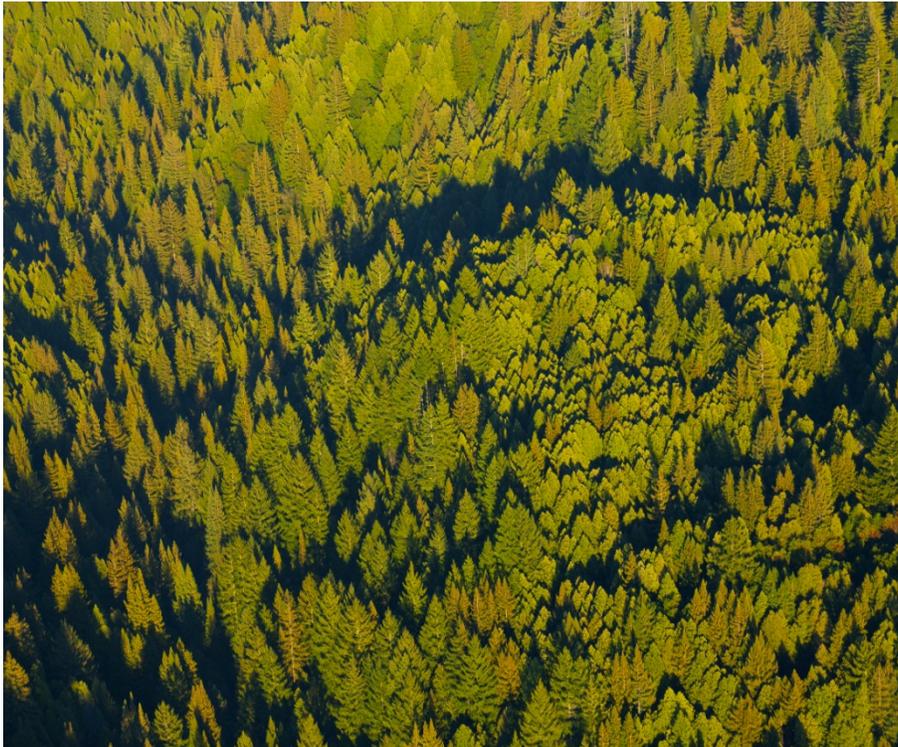

Exhibit 6: Site Photographs

Dozens of potential nest trees for marbled murrelet have been identified on the property, and its creeks support a healthy population of steelhead and coho salmon.

Exhibit 6: Site Photographs

Both predator and prey use the land's 70 miles of roads, some of which will become public trails.
