

Exhibit 2. Site Photographs

High density Spartina marsh at Humboldt Bay National Wildlife Refuge (HBNWR) before treatment.

High density Spartina marsh at HBNWR after treatment and passive revegetation.

Humboldt Bay owl's clover and arrowgrass in restored marsh.

Marshmaster top-mowing Spartina at Eureka Slough Marsh.

Marshmaster rototilling Spartina at Eureka Slough Marsh.

Seedling control with flame after primary treatment. Seedlings are also controlled with handheld brushcutters.

Exhibit 2. Site Photographs

Dune mat invaded by ripgut brome (above) , and uninvaded dune mat (below), both on North Spit.

Exhibit 2. Site Photographs

Steep foredune dominated by European beachgrass, to be restored to American dunegrass and other native species such as that shown at previously restored area below.

